dvd and 20-page A4 booklet

‘How readily does an Assessment for Learning (AfL) emphasis fit with other current initiatives?’

PRIMARY HEAD

‘I’ve been told AfL will raise standards generally – but I need someone to show me how this happens!’

PRIMARY HEAD

‘I lean naturally towards an AfL approach, but some of my colleagues don’t. How can I convince them?’

KS1 TEACHER

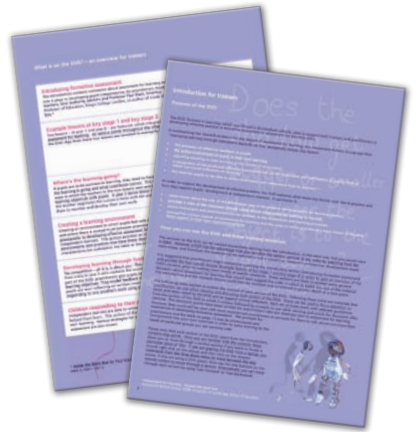

This DVD-based training package features primary classrooms developing an Assessment for Learning (AfL) approach which is clearly illustrated and analysed. Featuring Paul Black, Emeritus Professor of Education at King’s College London.

Birmingham
an important
on assessment for Learning

Partners in Learning:

- explores the processes of Assessment for Learning (AfL) in primary classrooms
- links theory and practice, clearing up any misunderstandings on the way, by using an effective combination of comments from teachers, pupils, headteachers, local authority advisers, and Professor Paul Black
- explains the advantages to both pupils and teachers of an emphasis on formative assessment
- illustrates and analyses features of AfL
- offers inspiration and guidance to those in the early stages of AfL, and reassurance and challenge to those already embracing this approach.

‘Sometimes I think we teachers are working harder than the pupils – will an AfL approach redress the balance?’

KS2 TEACHER

Partners in Learning will:

- support you in reviewing, planning and implementing your own AfL approach by letting you ‘sit in’ on real lessons in real classrooms
- provide you with a clear rationale for AfL and help you to develop your understanding and support you in classroom implementation
- enable you, through its flexibility, to focus on your own professional context and priorities
- focus your self-review and help to shape your planning through training prompts in the detailed and supportive booklet.
