

Personalising Transition

dvd and 24-page A4 booklet

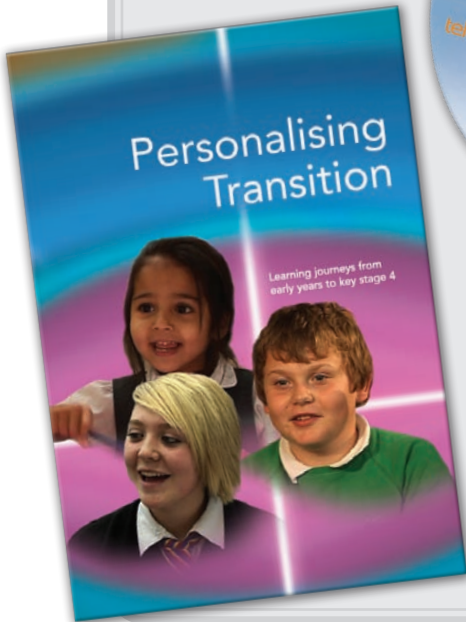

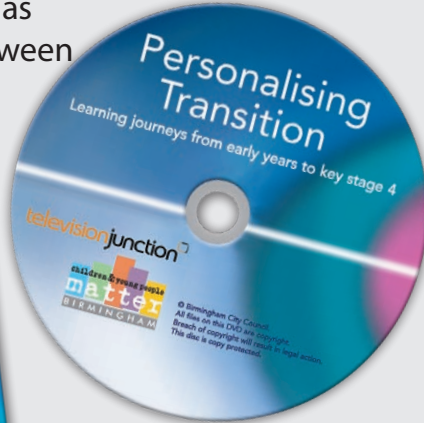

‘We hear a lot about personalisation in education. What does this mean when we look at transition?’

HEADTEACHER

‘How can we avoid the dips in attainment as children move between key stages?’

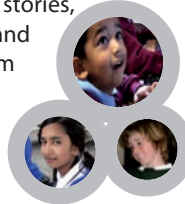

DEPUTY HEADTEACHER

‘Are there better ways of working with colleagues at times of transition to support pupils in their learning journeys?’

EARLY YEARS PRACTITIONER

A DVD and booklet exploring successful, personalised transitions across all phases of education. At the heart of the DVD are four contrasting stories, showing seamless progression and structured continuity within and between phases and key stages which will interest audiences from early years foundation stage through to Key Stage 4. Featuring Mick Waters, Director of Curriculum, QCA, with a contribution from Shirley Clarke, Associate, Institute of Education, London.

Birmingham
on transition

Personalising Transition:

- explores transition from the perspectives of learners, teachers and parents
- prompts practitioners to consider their roles in ensuring continuity at times of transition
- shows how previous learning can be valued and built upon
- examines transition through the five inter-related dimensions of enabling learners, developing the curriculum, exchanging information, involving parents and organising learning
- follows learning journeys from home into the early years foundation stage, Year 6 to Year 7 and Key Stage 3 to Key Stage 4.

‘What is the best way to develop shared practice across schools, so that transition is seamless?’

HEAD OF KS3

Personalising Transition will:

- provide case study material against which local authorities, headteachers and individual teachers can audit their current provision
- provide model experiences that are working successfully in settings and schools
- link transition to the wider trends towards successful learners, confident individuals and responsible citizens that fuel the twenty-first century curriculum.
